Kauvery Hospital performs first robotic paediatric Frey's surgery in TN

Chennai, May 22: Kauvery Hospital, Radial Road, has successfully performed a highly complex robotic pancreatic reconstruction surgery on a 12-year-old girl suffering from recurrent chronic pancreatitis caused by a rare congenital pancreatic abnormality.

The procedure is the first robotic Frey's operation performed in a paediatric patient in Tamil Nadu and marks a major step forward in minimally invasive pancreatic surgery for children. The girl had been experiencing repeated severe abdominal pain and pancreatitis due to pancreatic divisum, a congenital condition in which the pancreatic ducts fail to fuse normally during fetal development.

A paediatric Frey's surgery is an operation used to treat chronic pancreatitis in children when medicines and endoscopic treatments fail. It removes the diseased, inflamed part of the pancreatic head and creates a wider drainage pathway from the pancreas into the intestine so digestive juices can flow more normally. The goal is to reduce repeated pain attacks, prevent further pancreatic damage, and improve eating and nutrition. It is a complex surgery, but in carefully selected children it can provide strong pain relief and good recovery.

The surgery involved a robotic Frey's procedure, which removes diseased pancreatic tissue and creates a drainage pathway between the pancreas and the intestine. It was carried out using the Da Vinci Robotic Surgical System, which offers high-definition 3D vision, precision and improved dexterity for complex reconstructive surgery.

The procedure was led by Dr Senthil Gnanasekaran, Clinical Lead - Abdominal Organ Transplant & HPB Surgery, and Dr Piyush Bawane, Clinical Lead - Medical Gastroenterology. Doctors said the operation was completed with minimal blood loss and the child recovered well, with reduced pain and discharge on the sixth postoperative day.

Hospital officials said the case highlights the growing role of advanced robotic surgery in paediatric care and strengthens Kauvery Hospital's position in robotic gastrointestinal and hepatopancreatobiliary surgery in South India.
